"C'est un réel plaisir de recevoir chacun de vous à ce 45^e colloque de la société internationale d'éducation comparée en Océanie. Bienvenue tout particulièrement à nos trois conférenciers Konai Helu Thaman, Roger Dale et Emmanuel Tjibaou. Le laboratoire interdisciplinaire de recherche en éducation de l'École supérieure du professorat et de l'éducation de l'Université de la Nouvelle-Calédonie est honoré de faire ses premiers pas aux côtés de l'OCIES en participant à l'organisation de ce colloque. Votre présence et la richesse de nos échanges pendant ces trois jours feront rayonner notre université en Océanie et au-delà. En effet, au regard du programme, les présentateurs et participants viennent de Nouvelle-Zélande, Australie, Îles Cook, Fidji, Îles Salomon, Guam, Tonga, Angleterre, Suède, Hong-Kong, Japon, France, États-Unis, Inde. C'est un cadeau inestimable pour fêter les trente années d'existence de notre université ! La Nouvelle-Calédonie, terre sur laquelle vivent de multiples cultures et langues, est un lieu privilégié pour engager la réflexion sur une problématique fondamentale, celle d'une éducation équitable et durable pour nos enfants au cœur d'environnements en mutation."

Le comité organisateur

"It is a real pleasure to welcome you all to the 45th Annual Conference of the Oceania Comparative and International Education Society. A special welcome is addressed to our three keynote speakers Konai Helu Thaman, Roger Dale and Emmanuel Tjibaou. The Interdisciplinary Laboratory for Research in Education of the Faculty of Education of the university of New Caledonia is honored to make its first steps next to OCIES in taking part in the organising of the conference. Your venue and the richness of our exchanges that will occur throughout these three days will participate in promoting our university in Oceania and beyond. Indeed, by looking at the programme the presenters and participants travelled from New Zealand, Australia, Cook Islands, Fiji, Solomon islands, Guam, Tonga, England, Sweden, Hong-Kong, Japan, France, USA, India. There wouldn't be a better gift to celebrate the thirty years of existence of our university ! New Caledonia, where multiple cultures and languages live, is a privileged ground to engage a reflection on a major issue to us all, an education where equity and sustainability meet in environments undergoing mutation."

THEME CONFERENCE THEME CONFERENCE THEME CONFERENCE THEME CONFERENCE THEME

In 2015, "developed" and "developing" nations across the world signed up to the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development and the 17 Sustainable Development Goals within it. The theme of our 2017 OCIES Conference has been selected because of our belief that, two years into implementation, it is timely to consider the educational implications of the current global development agenda at regional and national levels. The twofold aim of the conference is to enhance critical dialogue about the relationship between education and sustainable development, in all its complexities, and to strengthen research relationships within and beyond our region. We are hopeful that the conference will both build on and challenge existing Comparative and International Education (CIE) knowledge and methodology, and work towards the production of new knowledge and practice. Researchers and practitioners in the field of Comparative & International Education see Education as at the heart of sustainable development and underpinning each of the SDGs. Of specific interest is how Goal 4, "To ensure inclusive and quality education for all and promote life-long learning", and its set of targets (see www.un.org/sustainabledevelopment/education/) might inform education development for Oceania. A key concern that might arise is to question the extent to which the international development community has universalised the notion of "sustainable development" and shaped a global discourse towards it, and how this could influence education policy and practice in Oceania. Also significant for Oceania, given both its cultural diversity and the importance of maintaining and enhancing indigenous knowledge and ways of living within the region, is that SDG 4 recognises both culture's contribution to sustainable development and the importance of respecting and learning from indigenous communities in order to promote sustainable lifeways. The Conference aims to explore the implications of sustainable development for education structures and processes (curriculum, pedagogy, assessment, management) at all levels (early childhood through to adult education); of all types (formal, non-formal, informal); and connecting to any or all of the three dimensions of sustainable development – environmental, social, and economic.

Thematic questions guiding the conference include:

- 1) How relevant and/or useful are globally defined sustainable development goals and targets to regional and national aspirations and needs? What are the implications of this for debates about the purposes and intended outcomes of inclusive and quality education and lifelong learning within regional/national/sub-national contexts?
- 2) What is the relationship between education and sustainable development? How might the discourse and practice of sustainable development affect educational settings at any or all learning levels (early childhood to adult)? In what ways can education research and practice influence sustainable development discourse and practice?
- 3) In what ways should schools and other educational institutions facilitate the development of the knowledges, skills, behaviours and attitudes needed for sustainable development? What do we know/need to know about the sets of knowledge and human capabilities that Oceanic communities value as defining sustainable development? What should be taught and learned? How and in what language(s)?
